

ANNUAL REPORT
SHELTON STATE COMMUNITY COLLEGE
1999-2000

This year the Shelton State Community College Alumni Association completes its most successful year. Last July an aggressive plan was laid out by the Alumni Council during the annual summer retreat at the home of alumni director Lucy Kubiszyn. A goal of 100 members was set for the membership campaign scheduled to begin in August 1999.

As part of the membership campaign a new brochure was designed, printed and mailed to all current, former, and prospective members. A direct mail piece also went to community leaders asking for their support. A letter and brochure went to members of the faculty and staff.

A year's free membership also went to 1999 graduates of the college. In October a follow-up was held when members of the Alumni Council manned telephones at the college to call former members asking them to renew their memberships. From these and other efforts, 109 people joined the alumni association this year.

In September Pat Headrick was installed as the new president of the Shelton State Alumni association during the installation of new officers. Officers in the association serve for a two-year period.

A party to welcome new members and visit with current ones was held at the University Club in October. Also, in October the Alumni Council held their annual fund raiser during Shelton's Homecoming basketball game. The money raised from the evening funds the alumni scholarship that the association gives each spring during Honors Night.

In November the Alumni Association sponsored the "Letters to Santa" project. Money raised through this project went to help a family of one of Shelton's former students during the Christmas season. In March members of the Alumni Association were treated to dinner and a talk on building ponds and waterfalls by Shelton instructor Dennis Crim. The evening, entitled "Wings and Waterfalls," featured two kinds of wings along with other delicious food.

The Alumni Association is proud of its record and support of the college and looks forward to the coming year.
